

FIELD SHOTGUN

This area of clay target shotgun shooting that has shown the greatest growth worldwide in recent years is Sporting Clays. This competition is set up in a natural bushland setting, with the traps presenting clay targets that simulate hunting a variety of game such as ducks, rabbits, quail and pheasants. The traps can be concealed in the bush or on towers, with the targets only visible in cleared areas. The targets can be shot over a course of six or seven 'stands', where shooters are shown targets in singles or doubles of various sizes and colors, and shoot each station with their squad of five or six shooters in turn. Most courses comprise 25 targets and the degree of difficulty can vary from easy to extremely hard.
